THE SCRAPPLE FAMILY

(At every supper table in North Platte, when the different members of the family gather for the evening meal, the affairs of the day are discussed and each gives and takes as he needs or must. The Scrapple Family is an ordinary North Platte family composed of Pa Scrapple, (retired), Ma Scrapple, Fanny (a stenographer), Billy (a high school boy) and the baby, (see eight.)

(Ma) Pa, why were you out so late last night? I thought you were going to the Democratic convention.

(Pa) I did go to the convention.

(Fanny) Oh, Pa, did Mr. Everett Evans get nominated? They say he is awful nice.

(Billy) Yes, Rube got nominated. I heard some of the men down town telling about it and they said it was some walk-away. The only bird—

(Ma) Pa, did they have many people there?

(Pa) Yes, it was a packed convention.

(Baby) Daddy, what is a packed convention?

(Fanny) My boss says it is when one side rushes in all of its voters in order to win. He said yesterday afternoon that he bet it would be packed.

(Ma) Pa, why did they hold it in such a small room?

(Pa) Well, you see Ma, we did not think that—

(Billy) Yes, Dad, I heard Tom Henley say that there would be only a few there as they never have many at a city convention. He said—

(Pa) I know son but you must remember that we have been cheated out of our rights by these reformers. Give me the good old days when one could do something in politics without having the whole world know about it. Then we had conventions and nominated our candidates for city offices without being bothered with so many people hanging round. And those days are coming back.

(Fanny) Did they come back last night Pa?

(Billy) I'll say so, nif. Why sis, they had the darndest crowd up there and if you had seen the different fellows nodding their heads at each other and making curious signs with their eyes and noses you would have thought they were a bunch of vamps. Carl and I looked in on our road home. We

(Pa) Billy, you don't understand politics the way she is worked. You had better keep away from such places (Ma) Was Mrs. Blank there, Pa?

(Pa) No, there were no women there. City politics don't interest women. That's why we call it Democratic. The great prin—

(Ma) Is Mr. Evans a Democrat?

(Fanny) No, Ma, he is a strong Republican. I heard my boss say yesterday that he bet the Democrats wouldn't stand for a Republican on the Democratic ticket. Pa, who was considered for Mayor at your convention besides Mr. Evans?

(Pa) No one else was named for Mayor. But Ora Elder was nominated for City Clerk.

(Ma) Is he a Democrat, Pa?

(Billy) Not much, Ma. I heard Sam Souder say he is a Republican.

(Fanny) Well of all things, Pa. You went to a Democratic Convention and nominated two Republicans.

(Pa) Ma, is there any dessert? Curtain.
